The first half of this workshop considers the literature review as a framing of voices, perspectives and debates on a topic through the lens of a central research question. It outlines the functions, content and structure of the typical narrative literature review, and highlights the importance of expressing one’s ‘scholarly voice’ through review, critical analysis and synthesis of sources in the existing literature.

The second half of the session focusses on finding quality information for your literature review and research. Using Google Scholar, the library catalogue and databases, we will discuss how to recognise and locate quality and relevant information to make your research journey more effective.

RSVP
RSVP is essential. Please RSVP to humgraduatestudies@curtin.edu.au.

Please check your email regularly for the latest information on workshops including venues and times.

Make tomorrow better.